

FLYING

“Just-One-Second-Ago-Broken Eggshell” (Mill Pond)

"One of the most original and complex indie-rock bands to have come out this millenium...Flying is a breath of fresh air." – Aural Minority

The world of psychedelic-folk music has just been changed forever!

Flying is a collective of four artists translating magic words and mysterious noises into chaotically sweet and ardent performances. Howling, complex, disheveled, gentle and playful, their music is at once intimate and otherworldly. It is new-dream-out-jazz-pop-noise-folk, invoking spirits Stevie Wonder, Sun Ra, Brigitte Fontaine, and Os Mutantes. Contemporary points of reference include Animal Collective, Maher Shalal Hash Baz, and Deerhoof.

“Just-one-second-ago-broken Eggshell” is Flying's debut full-length, out May 9th on Mill Pond Records (see also Luke Temple, Robert Stillman’s “Horses”). The album was recorded at home, on beaches, in barns and fields over 6 months. Old accordions, broken pianos, buzzing guitars, thickets of drum claps mingle with harsh trills and murky creaks. Influenced by everything, Eggshell is nonetheless a search and discovery mission, a set of narratives balanced between song and sound, a testament of anxiety and hope; a dense, fantastic adventure.

Based out of Brooklyn, Flying have been playing around NYC and the Northeast for the past year and a half with such bands as Deerhoof, Tunnel of Love, USAisamonster, Dirty Projectors, and Lavender Diamond.

Look for their US tour this summer.
